

GINA RINEHART'S ROAD TO RIO!

When she's not busy being a boss lady, Australia's richest woman Gina Rinehart is donning the green and gold!

Jet-setting to Rio to support the Aussies, the mining magnate – who is a patron of Australian swimming, synchronised swimming, rowing and volleyball – says her Games experience was 'one I'll never forget'.

Looking happier and healthier than she has in years, Gina appeared to have a great time meeting and cheering on our star athletes.

'After years of assisting our wonderful Aussie athletes, nothing was going to stop me from cheering our teams on in Rio,' Gina wrote in a piece for The Daily Telegraph. 'The great effort and sacrifices these young athletes make to compete at the world's top level is truly inspiring.'

Gina proudly met our country's top athletes.

'Moments like these are magic,' the heiress said of cheering on the Aussies at the Games.

GINA RINEHART CORRECTION

In last week's issue, we referred to Gina Rinehart as an 'heiress'. This is not a correct description and we are happy to set the record straight. Mrs Rinehart has personally built Hancock Prospecting up into one of Australia's most successful private companies ever.
